Justification for late assignment

Although I did plan poorly in that I only outlined my write-up prior to the weekend, many other elements played into this situation. Firstly, I had a choir concert on Thursday, 11/8/18, which eliminated a possible work-day. I then went back with my family to my home-town for the weekend, expecting to have plenty of time to work. My primary day for this work (Friday, 11/9/18) didn't go to plan. That afternoon, I took my mother to the chiropractor and then to the emergency room for abdominal pain, and did not leave the hospital until well into the evening. Even though we returned with some time left, I spent some time making sure she was comfortable and safe. On top of this, our two dogs were skunk-sprayed in our backyard that evening, and one of these dogs now has a puncture wound on his snout. I spent the rest of that evening, until 12:30 in the morning, at which time I began completing this form, helping clean the house, clean my dogs, and make sure my dog was not too badly injured or at risk of infection, especially so that my mother could relax. Although it is still possible for me to perhaps complete the assignment during this weekend, the volume of appointments and family obligations make it too large a risk not to reach out. The extra three days I am requesting (Monday, 11/12/18 through Wednesday, 11/14/18) are a worst-case scenario precaution, to allow myself plenty of extra time (the equivalent of the weekend again), such that I can still complete the assignment, even if the entire weekend is full of unexpected events or emergencies. Thank you.
